To whom it may concern,

I've worked with Matt McCord at Vessel for over 3 years. Matt is smart and innovative. He can find creative solutions to the most difficult problems and demonstrated that at Vessel many times.

No matter how the company strategy evolved, Matt always showed up with an abundance of feasible ideas for the product road map and effective solutions to the company's most challenging technical problems. He produced measurable results for the company. He provided valuable support to dozens of team members across the engineering, software, data science, chemistry, manufacturing, and quality departments. Matt also built and managed the company's portfolio of intellectual property. He got 2 patents granted and 3 more patents filed in the last year.

He took the initiative to host a weekly think tank meeting where team members enjoyed brainstorming about new technologies and ideas for future products. Matt is a team player who puts the mission first. He also has an easy going demeanor that makes working with him a pleasure. Matt would be an asset to any organization he joins.

Sincerely,

Christian Chasmer
